The Dialogue

On a chilly day in late December, Bill went to the downtown Bowesmont Library after work to return two books to the shelf: Man's Search for Meaning by Viktor Frankl and On the Road by Jack Kerouac. As he was placing the last book back on the shelf, he heard a soft voice say, "Excuse me, sir. Would you like me to help you find another book?"

Bill turned to see a middle-aged woman with glasses and a smile on her face. "Yes, I think I'd like to read something new," he replied. The woman introduced herself as Ms. Johnson and suggested a book that she had recently read. Bill was grateful for the recommendation and thanked her before leaving the library with the book in hand.

As long as there is life, there is hope to see the funding – perhaps through the Resource River flood control project, that would benefit from the original $680-million version of the project. The appropriations Committee recommended against the $1.1-billion version.
