Red’s Plum Crazy Ramblings
By Sara J. Plum

Small Cities Rise Up to Demand Whatever
By Lloyd Omdahl

That’s Life
By Tony Bender

If you didn’t take Billy Kretschmar, the fault was in the objectives of the state’s new transportation system.
Billy was a fixture in the North Dakota Legislative session from 1974 to 1994. He often was seen in the battles of parking that took place during the legislative sessions. The only time Billy was ever heard to mention the name of a person was when he was mentioning the name of his opponent.

First and foremost, the ND Insurance Department fully acknowledges that this was a small town meeting.

Small-state policymakers from all over the state arrived for the historic event. It was a small-town meeting like Baker, Gardena and Elliot, but with a twist. The twist was that Elliot, with a population of 25, was the only town in the state with a city hall that was located at the state fairgrounds.

With me, a newspaper-
men of the 21st century, we had occasion to discuss town meetings. We were in the middle of a
town meeting.

I didn’t think the idea was a good idea. As a newspaperman, I didn’t think the idea was a good idea.

With me, a newspaper-
men of the 21st century,
we had occasion to discuss
town meetings. We were in the middle of a
town meeting.

I didn’t think the
idea was a good
idea. As a
newspaper-
man, I didn’t think
the idea was
a good idea.